

Feature of the Week It's All in the Bag...

Now that my little boy is at that stage where anything and everything goes into his mouth, I am finding the need to bring toys (more than one in case of droppage) everywhere I go. To ensure that I control what he "eats". When my oldest son was a wee baby, I had a great little toybag that a friend of mine had given me as wrapping for a gift. I used it ALL the time. It tied nicely to my diaper bag and made it easy to have toys for my son all the times.

The only problem with the bag I had (which can be found at the dollar store) is that the long string could actually be a hazard should your baby get it around their neck. So I went in search of something safer. After some surfing, I found a mompreneur in western Canada who makes cotton travel products for kids. Woohoo! They make a great little travel bag that can be ordered from www.babyrhys.com for $15.99. This bag is a handy accessory that clips right on to your diaper bag (no long dangly strings) and is totally portable. They are 100% cotton, hand made products.

When I wrote to Baby Rhys to inquire about the toy bags, they also sent me some other useful travel tools like the diaper tote and the lunch wrap.

For those of you with older kids who no longer need to carry a diaper bag, the diaper tote is a great solution. With a slot for wipes, a diaper and a disposable pad, it folds up and fits nicely into your purse. Baby Rhys products also include, hats, booties, zippered bags and more. To see their full line, go to www.babyrhys.com.

If you or someone you know makes other great products we should know about, let us know at themommynetwork@mac.com.

Happy Travels!

Check out our Feature of the Week Archives...

Feature of the Week

Each week, The Mommy Network Canada will be showcasing a product, boutique or service. Check out the new feature every Sunday! If you have a recommendation, please feel free to email us @ themommynetwork@mac.com.